

The schoolchildren's path

Sud Creuse – Aubusson – lac de Vassivière

Ecole de Peyrat vers 1920 (Commune de Peyrat la Nonière)

1890: the first start of the school year at Peyrat la Nonière. Long before that, children, with bags on their shoulders, used to wear their goloshes on the surrounding paths.

The commune of Peyrat le Nonière has managed to preserve many traces of its history and its local heritage. By walking in their footsteps, we can immerse ourselves in the world of these schoolchildren of a bygone era in Creuse.

The Bol de Gargantua (A)

An ancient baptismal font. Legend has it that Gargantua passed with his dog over the Barbot bridge which spans the Voueize river at the bottom of the village. Dazzled by this beautiful water, he took his bowl and filled it with water. But he nearly choked when he swallowed a donkey drifting down the river. Mad with rage, Gargantua threw his bowl away, and it landed on the village square.

The dovecote of the Château du Chiroux (B)

The château is distinguished by its rectangular keep, flanked by two watchtowers that contrast with the circular architecture of its dovecote. The pigeons are bred for their meat but especially for the colombine (droppings) which is used as a natural fertiliser.

The Arcy oil mill (C)

Cette ancienne huilerie a cessé de fonctionner en 1914 avec le départ des hommes pour la Grande Guerre. A l'intérieur subsistent notamment le pressoir à traction animale & le broyeur à colza.
